Pierre Crémieux, a Managing Principal of Analysis Group, has a broad range of expertise in industrial organization, health economics and health policy, antitrust, econometrics, statistics, and labor economics. He has consulted to numerous clients in the United States and Canada and testified in bench and jury trials, arbitrations, and administrative proceedings.

Dr. Crémieux has served as an expert and supported other experts in both litigation and non-litigation matters on issues including antitrust claims, generic product entry, product liability and mass tort, e-discovery sampling procedures, 10b-5 securities claims, and general commercial claims as well as a variety of labor related matters. He has assessed the evaluation of damages on a class wide basis in some of the largest class actions matters in recent years.

His scientific research has been published in numerous peer-reviewed journals including the Journal of Health Economics, Health Economics, Industrial and Labor Relations Review, the Journal of Labor Research, The Review of Economics and Statistics, the Journal of Clinical Oncology, and the American Journal of Managed Care. He has also published articles in legal and business publications, such as Update, the American Bar Association Economics Committee Newsletter, and Disease Management & Health Outcomes. Dr. Crémieux's research has been cited in leading media outlets including the Wall Street Journal and Forbes.

Dr. Crémieux has frequently presented at leading legal, health care, and economics seminars where he has addressed such topics as antitrust and class certification in the both the U.S. and Canada, as well as topics related to health outcomes. He has also been invited to teach courses on economics, statistics and health care at various schools including McGill University, Boston University, and Harvard Medical School.

Prior to joining Analysis Group in 1997, Dr. Crémieux spent five years as a Professor at the University du Québec à Montréal, where he still serves as an Adjunct Professor.
